2. Ex-ante cost report: estimated costs of your asset management or investment consulting mandate

The following calculation examples represent the estimated costs that are presumed to result from an asset management or investment consulting mandate, based on an assumed investment amount of EUR 1 million as part of an individual securities mandate. In the first example, the asset management fee is calculated based on a fixed percentage. In the case of an investment consulting mandate, it is assumed that the contract relates to an overall portfolio. In the second calculation, the fee is calculated based on a fixed percentage as well as a performance fee.

The estimated charges depend on your assets under management, the number of securities, the transaction frequency, and the selection of the custodian bank. Your investor profile and your selected strategy have no impact on the expenses.

This is a fictitious calculation example applicable to the investment strategies pursuing income, growth, and opportunity. You can find this information in Appendix 2 / Item F of the asset management and consulting agreement.

A custodial account maintained with Liechtensteinische Landesbank AG was assumed for the fictitious calculation examples.

In the context of an asset management or investment consulting agreement, neither the securities transactions that are carried out, nor the costs incurred in this connection (in particular third-party fees) are always known in detail in advance. The fees and charges can therefore only be estimated based on experience at the inception of the asset management or investment consulting agreement. In terms of the transaction frequency, we assume an annual reallocation of 20% of total investments. The effective costs may therefore deviate from these estimates in individual cases.

In addition, the performance of the stocks has an influence on the fee in instances where the charges are calculated based on a fixed fee and a variable component (performance fee). The performance fee is assessed according to the positive difference between the net asset value of the assets underlying the contract at the beginning of the year (or at the time of contract signing) and at the end of the year, i.e., the annual capital appreciation, adjusted for inflows and outflows. The calculation is based on the latest year-end peak as the starting balance. The performance fee only takes effect when the most recent year-end level is greater than the year-end level achieved since signing the contract (high-water mark).

¹ Custody fees (or all-in fees), transaction costs, third-party costs, asset manager fee. In general, in particular custodian account fees and potential investment or asset management fees are charged periodically.

² The asset manager accepts neither retrocessions nor gratuities of any kind. If payments are nonetheless made by third parties without the participation of the asset manager, these are passed on to the client in full.

³ Approximate, rounded costs related to the management of products (TER). The product costs are both defined and collected by the particular product provider. These are examples of the weighted, expected product costs in case of a partial implementation of the particular strategy using passive collective investments (ETFs). For bonds, we rely on strategic quotes (with currency-hedged tranches) in the areas of inflation-protected, high-interest, convertible bonds, and emerging countries. For equities, the strategic region quota is based on the MSCI World AC. Japan, the Pacific as well as emerging countries are covered by ETFs (with non-currency-hedged tranches) with the corresponding weighting.
